INTERNET SAFETY FOR CHILDREN

THE FIRST CRITICAL STEP IS TALKING TO YOUR CHILDREN ABOUT THEIR INTERNET USE.

- Sit with them at the computer and have them show you what type of websites or chat rooms they visit.
- Make yourself familiar with the Internet by using it yourself.
- When your child feels that you understand Internet resources and utilize them, they are more likely to come to you to discuss problems they've encountered.

SET REASONABLE RULES AND GUIDELINES FOR COMPUTER USE BY YOUR CHILDREN.

- Discuss the rules and post them near the computer as a reminder.
- Remember to monitor your children's compliance with the rules, especially when it comes to the amount of time your children spend on the computer.
- A child's excessive use of online services or the Internet, especially late at night, may be a clue that there is a potential problem.

BE SURE TO MAKE COMPUTER USE A FAMILY ACTIVITY.

- Consider keeping the computer in a family room rather than the child's bedroom.
- Get to know their "online friends" just so you know all of their other friends.

LIMIT ACCESS FOR CHILDREN.

- Check your Internet service provider (ISP) for a function allowing parents to limit access for children.
- The Internet service you use may already have a "safe child" section or filtering feature to protect your children from inappropriate sites.

NEVER GIVE OUT IDENTIFYING INFORMATION.

- Instruct your child to never reveal your address, school name, or telephone number in a public message such as chat or bulletin boards.
- Think carefully before revealing any personal information such as age, race, or financial information.

NEVER ALLOW CHILDREN TO ARRANGE A FACE-TO-FACE MEETING.

- Don't allow your children to meet with another Internet user without your permission and attendance.
- It is usually best to avoid situations where face-to-face meetings are even considered.
